Bronxville has a brand-new police force to-day. One-helf the department is in the hospital, and while the other half is able to walk around he is not able to use his right hand, owing to the loss of a finger.

Indirectly burglars caused the divaster. There have been a lot of burglasies lately in that section, and whenever one of the thioves have crossed the line of vision of a copper he was making such speed if would have taken a wing shot to hit him.

So yesterday Chief of Police Charles Van Bueren and Roundsman Charles Ambrose stepped out to the edge of town and set up a mark to shoot at and improve their aim. They plugged the target so often they began to feel sorry for the next burglar. Finally, after loading again, Ambrose started to clean off the powder stains.

While rubbing the barrel with a rag the revolver was discharged. The builet took off one of Ambrose's fingers and then struck Van Beuren in the abdomen. At first it was thought the Chief was mortally hurt, but he railled and apent such a good night it was expected to-day that he would recover.
